

PRONOUN REFERENCE

First Lady of flamboyance: Michelle Obama's confident off-duty chic on London city break

By Daily Mail Reporter

Last updated at 4:16 PM on 10th June 2009

Source: <http://www.dailymail.co.uk/news/article-1191620/First-Lady-flamboyance-Michelle-Obamas-confident-duty-chic-London-city-break.html>

Assignment: Read the article below. Number your paper 1-12 and replace the ambiguous/ vague pronouns with clear antecedents (nouns)

Her [1] taste for restrained elegance has earned her [2] the title of First Lady of Fashion. But Michelle Obama clearly felt something rather more outlandish was in order for a sightseeing trip in London yesterday.

On a visit to Westminster Abbey she [3] wore a trendy colourful tunic embellished with ribbons and fabric flowers. Teaming the look with a patterned belt she [4] made the most of her narrow waist, while smartly referencing eclectic catwalk looks by British designer Christopher Kane. Worn with dark slim-fitting trousers she [5] topped it [6] off with not one, but two cardigans. It [7], however, may have had more to do with the chilly British weather than any fashion statement. Completing the fashion-forward look were a collection of silver necklaces and some smart black pumps.

Mrs Obama, whose husband had flown home following his official visit to France to mark the 65th anniversary of D-Day, has been enjoying a two-day holiday in London with her daughters. Today they [8] were given a tour of Pinewood Studios, including the set of the final Harry Potter. As a special treat to mark Sasha's eighth birthday, she [9] and her 10-year-old sister Malia, both avid Potter fans, met Daniel Radcliffe, Emma Watson and the other stars of the movie. They [10] then had a party in the Great Hall on the Harry Potter film set - along with the cast. They [11] had a private tour understood to be conducted by Joshua Berger, an American who heads Warner Brothers UK. He [12] donated more than $33,000 to various Democrat election funds last year.